From the New-York Mirror. A SERENADE. BY JOHN AUGUSTUS SHEA.

I've watched the tardy Sun go down, Till darkened Mona's topmost tree, And shone the star-encircled crown Of Dian rising from the sea; And now, my dreaming girl, I bring The offering of my heart to thee! Wake from thy slumbers while I sing, Réveillez-vous belle endormie!"

There is a star that shineth bright, And only lovers' eyes can see, And, calm or stormy be the night, Its home is all tranquillity :-The star of beauty born above, Moving and beaming but in thee; Then wake, my own, my gentle love, Réveillez-vous belle endormie!

I would not be again a boy, With mind unripe and thoughtless brain; No! give me love's romantic joy, And all the transport of its pain; Maturity of manly bliss,

To weave with mine thy destiny, And sing by midnight moons like this. Réveillez-vous belle endormie!

The world hath slaves who dare not know The pulse, the paradise of love : The passion's range, the spirit's glow, The fire that kindleth from above; Who ne'er by moon or lesser star Have roamed by bower or summer sea, Or sung to lute or light guitar,

Mine is the glory, thine the spell, We both reflect their mingled pow'rs; From starry sky to leafy dell The universe of soul is ours. Ne'er could a world, by love unblest, Be dwelling-place, my girl, for thee, Réveillez-vous belle endormie!

When rapture is life's only rest: Réveillez-vous belle endormie! Then wake the lute thou's waked so oft, And sing again, as oft thou'st sung, And in that silken language soft Which thrilleth uttered from thy tongue; And as thy accents melt along,

Like wind-harp breathings o'er the sea, I'll blend with it my moonlight song, Réveillez-vous belle endormie! * Arouse thee, beautiful sleeper!

The Divining-Rod.

The art of discovering water courses under the surface of the earth by means of a green rod newly cut from the peach, hazel or cherry tree, has been known in Europe for several years. It is said the discovery was made in Germany, but by whom is uncertain. Until a very late period it his been considered an imposture, and ranked with the arts of magicians and other vain pretenders to mysterious powers. This opinion of the power of the 'divining-rod' or 'magic wand,' as it has been termed, has undoubtedly arises from the fact than in the hands of many persons the action of the rod is wholly imperceptible, while in others the at traction of the water, especially if it be near the surface and the vein large, is surprisingly great. When the wand is of a brittle nature the attractive power is so forcible as frequently to break it.

From the numerous experiments made in France.

since the commencement of the present century, by Thouvenel and other men of science, the claim of the divining-rod are found to rest on well knows material powers. The art of finding water by its means is well established and promises to be of great utility to our country. The theory explain ing the phenomena of the 'magic wand,' suppose that the water forms with the earth above it, and the fluids of the human body, a galvanic circle This circle is more or less perfect, as the state and condition of the body of the operator qualifies it to be a better or worse conductor of the galvanic fluid The human body is one of the best conductors ver discovered, and weakly or debilitated persons are said to be better conductors than persons in sound health, and the attraction is greatest when the skin is wet, particularly the hands and arms. Salt water, or a weak solution of the muristic acid are the best fluids for moistening the skin. The effect will be increased if the operator be barefooted, his feet and hands having been previously wetted with either of the aforesaid fluids, but if he have silk gloves or silk stockings on, the rod will not be suspended by an electric, or in immediate contact with an electric no attraction will be felt, and the degree of attraction varies as any substances lying between the water and the hand of the operator are more or less adapted to conduct the galvanic fluid.

Such are some of the facts stated by writers or the subject, but of the reality of the powers attributed to the 'divining-rod,' we now need no foreign authorities to carry conviction to every intelligent mind. We have in this city several operators; men of the most unquestionable character, whose powers have been tested by the severest scrutiny, and who have never failed to convince the mest incredulous. The writer has known several stout unbelievers thrown into the most ludicrous predicament by suddenly discovering that they themselves were among the magic, and had all the powers of the best water-finders! The powers of the 'magic wand' being natural powers, it only requires that the natural means be present in any in dividual to produce the necessary result.

Any person may discover whether or not he has the powers of a water-finder by the following experiment:-Let him cut a branch of peach or cherry tree having a fork with two twigs of a length and thickness nearly equal, and slender enough to be quite flexible. If formed correctly it will nearly represent the letter Y. Let him take the small ends of the twigs, one in his right hand and one in his left, and hold it so that the main branch, where the fork begins, shall be uppermost and nearly perpendicular to the earth, but a little inclining forward. Holding it in this position, let him walk slowly and carefully over the ground where water is to be sought for, and if the bedy of the operator be a good galvanic conductor, the wand when over a vein of water that is near th surface, will be drawn forward and downward with considerable force; and if the vein be large it will point directly down to the earth. The causes of this phenomenon being natural, and invariable athe principle of gravitation, water will always be found nearer the surface of the earth when thus indicated by the divining-rod, than in other places. TO TAILORS .- One of the greatest discoveries ever made in the art of Cutting.-JABEZ DAVIS has discovered the true principle in the Balancing and Drafting of Coats—which principle I have no doubt has been more studied than any other science, for all other sciences have been confined to but few compared with the ences have been confined to but few compared with the thousands of the trade that have turned their attention to discover this point, both here and in Europe for this fifty years. It is an entirely original and self-varying system, nothing complicated, no matter in what position the person stands. When you draft the Coat, it works out every point perfectly correct. This system has been thoroughly attested by a number of the trade for eighteen months in New-York. Any of the trade wishing to obtain a good rule for Drafting Coats, with an original improvement on Vests, and other useful instructions in the general art of Cutting, are solicited to call at 136 Fulton st. New-York, where they will receive every attention.
